HELPING EVERY CHILD FIND THEIR VOICE

PRACTICAL SONGWRITING IDEAS FOR MUSIC TEACHERS!

1. Rhyme Time

Pick a topic to write about, (for example, 'love') and create rhyming patterns. The most common ones are AABB, ABAB, ABCABC - but you can create your own ones! It's fun to try and switch between perfect rhymes and near perfect rhymes. Challenge yourself to do as many as you can!

Example

I hate it when we're apart - A
But you're always in my heart - A
You've taken up a big place - B
And from my heart you won't be erased - B

2. Song Title Inspiration

If you can't think of a subject or an idea to write a song about then choose 5 items from your bedroom. Write these objects down and think of some associated words to create your song title!

For example:

Bed = Safe Haven
Guitar = Broken Strings
Window = What Do You See?

You can then begin to write lyrics based on the title of your song!

3. The 'Cutting Up' Technique

Find a magazine or a newspaper, cut out some phrases, words or headlines from them and piece them together to make some lyrics. David Bowie and Kurt Cobain were big fans of this method. The phrases in the newspaper will probably be totally different from your own, but it's good to push yourself and write in a different way, and get out of habits that you might have. You can always add more of your own words if you want to!

4. Rewrite Your Favourite Song

Pick your favourite song - and rewrite it in YOUR words! Don't worry about the lyrics fitting to the original melody, this is your version of the song and you can create a new melody to it. Every song has been written before but what makes them special and different is how YOU say it.

5. Object Writing

Pick a word/have someone give you a word (for example, 'time') then write down or type whatever comes to mind when you think of that word for 10 minutes. Do not let your pen come off the paper - if you get stuck you can even write "I am stuck", anything goes, be creative, there are no limits! In this exercise you aren't necessarily writing lyrics, you are writing about a certain word (in sentences). Once the time is up look back and see if there are any key words/phrases/sentences that you have written that could be used as song lyrics.
